He also lived on Route 1 in Colon, MI, until he graduated from high school. On 3 May 1946, he joined the Navy as a part of the Holloway Program, which was intended to recruit new pilots after WWII. He attended two years of college at the Lawrence Institute of Technology in Detroit, Michigan, he went to Pensacola, Florida for one and a half years of flight training and three months Navy Bomber Training, then he went to Coronado Naval Air Station in San Diego, CA. He m Lottie Gruszczynski on 14 Feb. 1948. On 4 June 1950, Doc became the youngest Navy pilot in the US.

Doc was sent to the Far East in June of 1950 with the VP-47 on Patrol Duty of the Pacific. In September, the United States entered the Korean War. Before the declaration of war, all of his squadron's armor and artillery had been sent to the Phillipines, so each pilot only had a 45 caliber pistol and four bombs for his plane. For a while, some squadrons had to resort to using depth charges as bombs.

Upon his return to the United States in late 1950, he served at Coronado Naval Air Station and Alameda Naval Air Station in California, then he was sent to Pensacola Naval Air Station, where he taught flying for two years. Doc was co-pilot of the first T-34 Mentor, and he was also co-pilot of the first P-3 Demonstrator. In 1953, he was one of three men in charge of selecting the P-3 as the official Navy training plane, which has been used by the Navy for more than forty years. Doc was transferred to N.A.A.S. Georgia for instruction in blimp flying, and spent two and a half years flying blimps at Lakehurst N.A.S. in Lakehurst, NJ at a time when blimp development was highly classified. One of the blimps that he flew was the ZPG-3, which set a world record for flying eleven days without refueling.

While Doc was in Georgia, he was the program manager for four air squadrons. Under his guidance, these squadrons went from being extremely low-ranked to being the top-ranked squadrons in the nation. One of the squadrons won the Conway Trophy for being the best anti-sub squadron in the United States. He then went to Jacksonville N.A.S., Florida, where he oversaw the success of six more squadrons. Doc eventually settled in Portage, MI.
